Virginia Chooses Electude

Electude USA announced today that the Commonwealth of Virginia has selected Electude's Automotive Essentials solution for the state's high school automotive curriculum. With this decision, Virginia has moved its automotive programs to the forefront of career and technical education.

Electude is the world's leading automotive e-learning solution used in over seventy countries, by thousands of schools, hundreds of thousands of students and in over thirty languages. The six thousand automotive technology students in Virginia's secondary-level schools will now have access to the most advanced automotive learning tool available. Electude's online lessons combine graphics, text and formative assessments to create an engaging, interactive and discovery-based learning environment, creating a pathway from theory to application in the shop. As an online product, Electude provides a comprehensive teaching solution when automotive students need to study from home.

"We are honored that the Commonwealth of Virginia selected Electude for all its automotive programs in the state," said Thomas Snyder, President of Electude USA.

"The number of Departments of Education determined to drive their state's educational systems forward continues to grow." Mr. Snyder expounded.

"In doing so, leading states, such as Virginia, have boldly jettisoned outdated learning methods and embraced online solutions that effectively teach students – from home or in school."
